Lunik

FOD

What do cuckoo clocks, Toblerone, foreign bank accounts and skiing holidays have in common with Lunik? They're all big in Switzerland and like most of the above Lunik are ripe for export. They tick all our boxes and they scale the heights musically.

Lunik are fronted by the gorgeous Jäel, (pronounced Yile) and her vocals remind us of Nina Persson of The Cardigans. From their trip-hop roots the band have developed a more rockier feel. Ex-Blondie bass player Nigel Harrison is a big fan and acclaimed producer Bob Rose takes the knob-twiddling credit on the album, Lonely Letters.

In order to escape National Service , 3 of the band have been declared psychologically unsound!

Originally formed 10 years ago, Lunik's current line-up has been together for just 2 years and the change of personnel and musical style has brought them recognition and success in their homeland. Sharper than a swiss army knife they could be the first Swiss band to make it big in the UK.
